

ALIYYAH-BEGUM NASSER

I have a firm belief, derived from my faith in Islam, that we have a duty to use the resources we are endowed with for the betterment of others: to enable and facilitate progress. Through my working life I have been focussed on supporting organisations, communities, and individuals to reach their full potential.

I have observed the work of the SIA for many years now in my role is a Director of a specialist neurological rehabilitation service, Askham Rehab, in Cambridgeshire and having seen the great work of the association in supporting those with a spinal cord injury I am keen to support it as a Trustee.

I was a founding member on the Trustee Board of Maslaha, a London-based charity and I have a strong involvement in voluntary work through my faith community. I am also a trained mediator – supporting people to resolve their civil and commercial conflicts as peacefully as possible.

As a mother, mentor, mediator, businessperson, volunteer and trustee, I hope to contribute to the quality of life of those with whom I work and interact.
